I. OPEN DISASTERS/EMERGENCIES:

II. WEATHER:

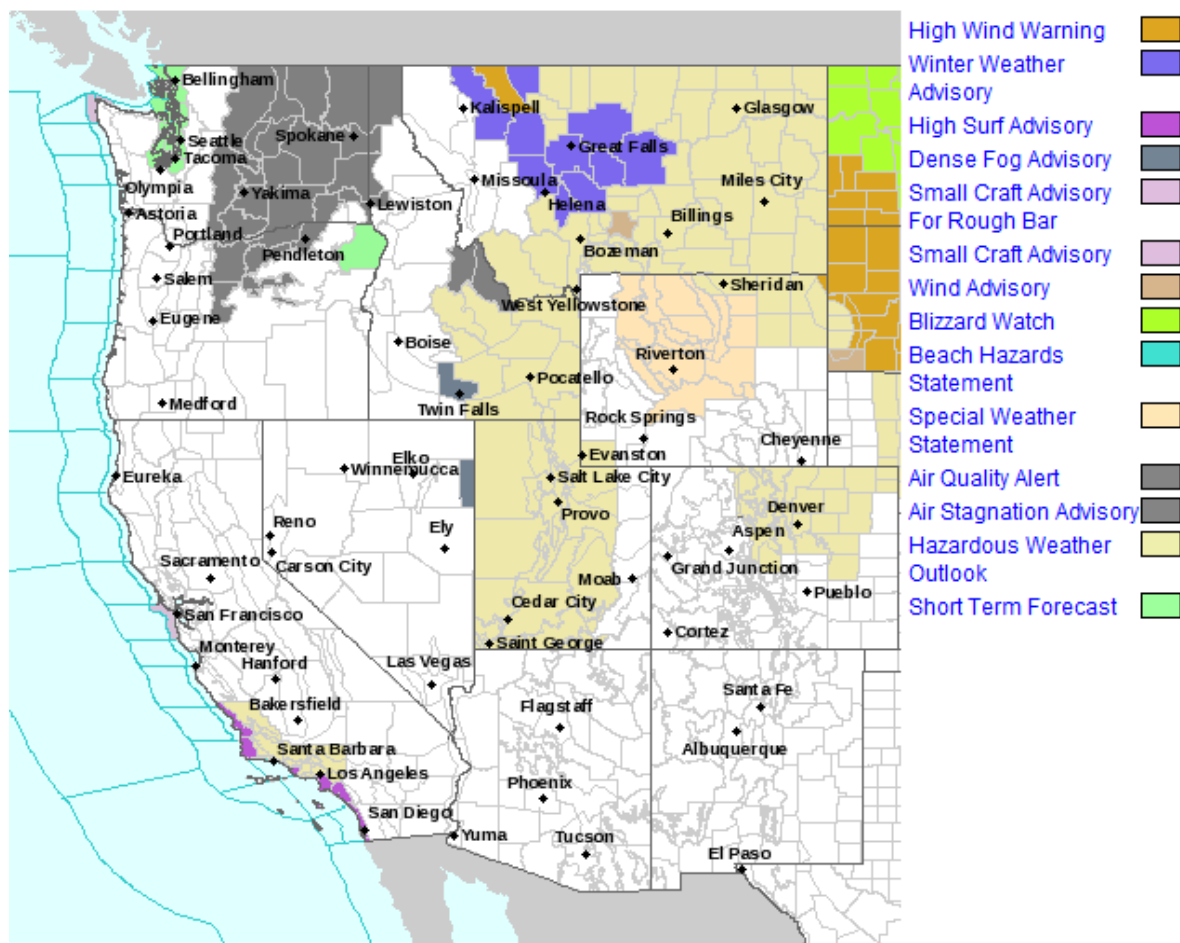

Northern California

High pressure ridge over the west coast will bring continued dry conditions and light winds with record high daytime temperatures into early next week. Pacific westerly's start to undercut the ridge Tuesday and Wednesday for slight precipitation chances far northern California. There is a better chance of precipitation over much of northern California Thursday through the end of the week.

Southern California

Partly to mostly cloudy conditions will persist through the weekend. Weak offshore flow will give way to weak onshore flow allowing for a slight cooling trend through early next week. High pressure will build Tuesday into Wednesday allowing for warmer conditions. High pressure will breakdown late in the week bringing cooler temperatures and increasing clouds across the forecast area.

III. FIRES:

Overall Fire Risk:

Northern California

Fuels remain very dry as the drought and very warm weather continues. In addition, lack of snowpack is making much more of the area's fuel load exposed to the elements than is typical for this time of year. Coastal and northern zones may see an increase in fuel moisture beginning Tuesday as onshore flow returns with higher Relative Humidity (RH), and chances for light precipitation. Other areas will see a more gradual increase in fuel moisture beginning Tuesday.

Southern California

The large fire potential will be low across the region through the forecast period. Most of the region will continue to have record low fuel moistures and record high Energy Release Components (ERC) through the middle of next week. There will be light initial attack activity through the forecast period, except Initial Attack (IA) activity may increase a little Tuesday and Wednesday when temperatures will be at their peak and humidity at a minimum.

Drought 2014 (Update)

Governor Brown Declares Drought State of Emergency

On January 17, 2014, with California facing water shortfalls in the driest year in recorded state history, Governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. proclaimed a State of Emergency and directed state officials to take all necessary actions to prepare for these drought conditions.

In the State of Emergency declaration, Governor Brown directed state officials to assist farmers and communities that are economically impacted by dry conditions and to ensure the state can respond if Californians face drinking water shortages. The Governor also directed state agencies to use less water and hire more firefighters and initiated a greatly expanded water conservation public awareness campaign.

Situation:

The lack of winter rain and snowfall has resulted in drought conditions throughout the State. Some local jurisdictions are implementing mandatory conservation orders. The Governor has established a Drought Task Force to oversee and coordinate the response to this event.

The Task Force continues to be in very close contact with local jurisdictions and state agencies to monitor the health of state's water, agriculture, and economy.
